52 Real Examples of Business Instagram Captions

Introduction

Growing business is complicated. With all the balance sheets, hiring processes, lead generation campaigns, company culture initiatives, and financial modeling, it's easy to overlook one crucial aspect of a business in the age of social media: Instagram captions.

Instagram has more than one billion monthly users, so it makes sense that businesses want to get a presence on the site and somehow, somehow, monetize that presence.

Once you determine how your Instagram page should be utilized, the next step is to develop a strategic approach to the captions used on your posts. To help inspire your caption creation strategy, we've identified 52 brands with stellar Instagram captions like Airbnb, Postmates, Target, and Wistia for you to learn from and see in action.

Instagram Caption

Best Practices

1. Stay Short & Sweet

Instagram is known for visuals, so the focus should be on the photo, and the words should serviceably compliment the photo. Longer captions could disinterest your followers, who may be inclined to scroll to the next visual instead of reading your message. Keep your captions concise and to-the-point without being overtly direct. If you feel more words are necessary, provide a link to more information and include “link in bio” in the caption.

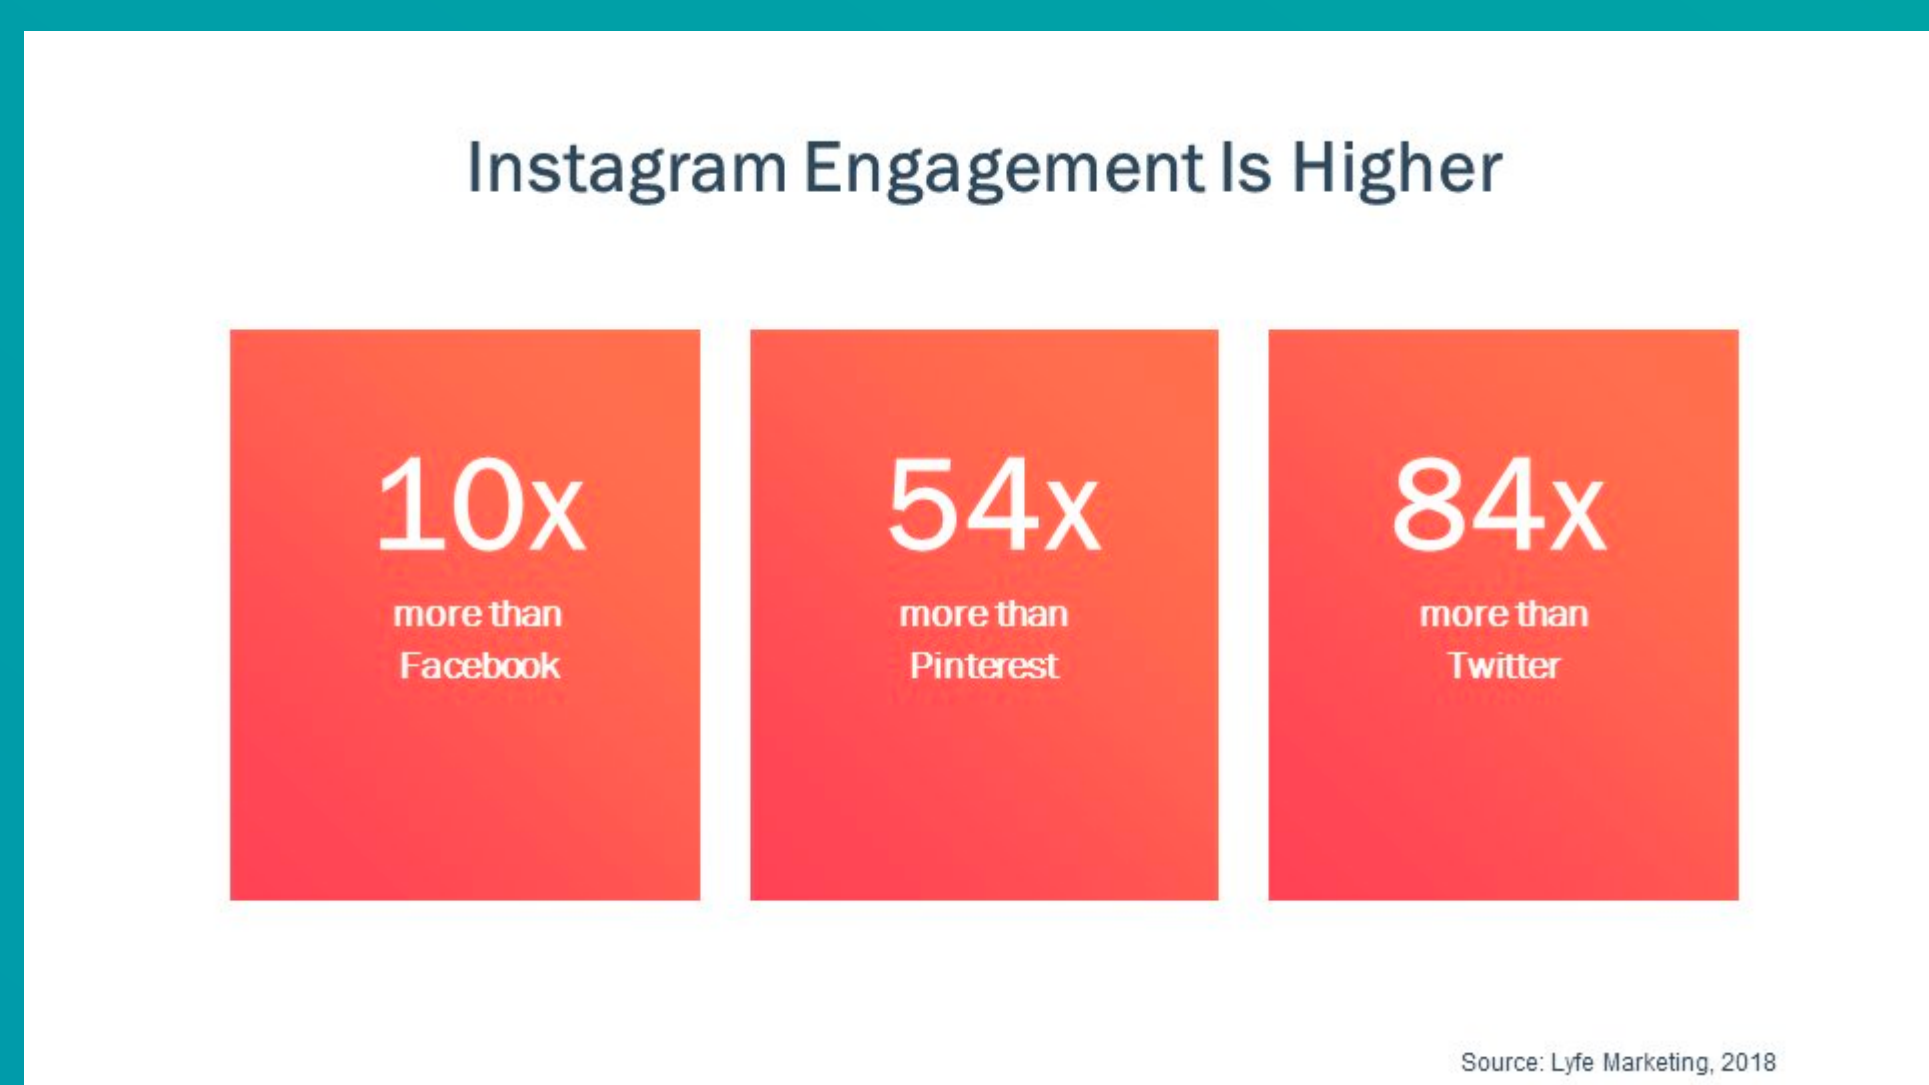

2. Have Fun

Unlike Facebook and LinkedIn, where conversations and messaging tend to be more structured and formal, Instagram can be a place for you to show the witty and modern side of your brand. Puns and plays on words are always welcome.

3. Remember to #Hashtag

If anything in your caption lends itself to a larger conversation, be sure to put a hashtag in front of it. This could be for something as general as #Startups or #Agency to something more specific to your company. For example, every post that goes out on @HubSpotLife – the Instagram page for HubSpot’s culture – contains the hashtag #HubSpotLife, encouraging other HubSpot employees to use the same hashtag when posting on Instagram about their jobs.

Spot the CEO 🤔

Why This Caption Works

This SEO software company is well-known for brining ROI to homepage and blog keyword optimization, but this caption shows a lighter side of the company. Casually encouraging followers to “spot the CEO,” it shows people that they are interacting with a company that values the contributions of all in a team setting. Plus, it’s a great use of emojis in Instagram captions.

How many Atlassians does it take to spell "TEAM"? 🤔

Why This Caption Works

A play on the classic "How many _____ does it take to _____ ?", this caption attempts to enumerate all the faces at Atlassian. A clear use of Instagram for recruiting rather than marketing, anyone thinking of a new career would likely be excited to apply to a company that puts their employees in the spotlight (and in a word).

Your fall brew's Better Half. ☕🍂

Today we found another perk of our office...A rooftop that offers prime solar eclipse viewing!

Why This Caption Works

The caption suggests this is just one of the perks one will receive while working at this Boston-based advancement software company. It also shows prospective candidates they won't be forced to stay hunched over their computers during an event like the solar eclipse. Lastly, who doesn't love rooftops?

Caption

Variety is the spice of life. 🍷 #shakeshack

Why This Caption Works

Shack Shack's caption showcases the wide variety of their menu known primarily for its burgers. The words might come across as cliché, but it could be argued that those captions work best on Instagram, particularly alongside emojis and hashtags.

Whether it's a step, a journey, or a destination, leave your mark wherever you go. #MakeYourMark #MarkoftheMonth

Why This Caption Works

The idea of branding Sharpie alongside terms like "leave your mark" and "make your mark" just makes sense for a permanent marker manufacturer.

New #SpotifySingles from #ChristineAndTheQueens just arrived, including a cover of the #Sade classic No Ordinary Love 🥰

Why This Caption Works

This caption jumps right into it, without a preface like “We’re so excited to announce the new...” And with just the right amount of hashtags and emojis, this caption takes what could have been a monster of caption and makes it awesome.

Today, a doodle. Tomorrow? The Louvre. Get everything your future artist needs.

Why This Caption Works

The office and back-to-school supplies store has an inspirational caption for the kids who hate having only one month left of summer. Their take on the well-known "Today? _____. Tomorrow? _____" phrase keeps the caption identifiable and easy to relate to.

Raise your hand if you love fall. #PumpkinSpiceLatte

Why This Caption Works

Autumn in America is incomplete without thousands upon thousands of Instagram posts about Starbucks' pumpkin spice lattes. Starbucks owns this, mentality knowing full well their brand goes hand-in-hand with fall in many corners of the world.

Model X has landed in Australia

Why This Caption Works

Tesla is making an name for itself around the world, and the caption for this post of a futuristic-looking car expands on that promise. It's an even cooler caption when you realize a Tesla car was in space less than two years after this was posted.

When it's a winter wonderland during our delivery route. ❄️📦
#NewYorkCity #UPSAroundTheWorld

Why This Caption Works

The caption manages to both acknowledge the beauty of a winter snowfall while pointing out their team is working hard to deliver in the circumstances. It's a good way of both showing brand and how hard the UPS team works to keep things running smoothly.

At #INBOUND18? Come say hi to the team. We're in the exhibit hall at booth M3.

Why This Caption Works

It can be confusing to come up with an approach to promote your presence at a popular event or trade show. If you're ever stuck on what to say, follow Vidyard's example. Don't forget to hashtag the event name and share your location, just like Vidyard did.

tap, tap Is this thing on? clears throat 1 week until “One, Ten, One Hundred” drops!! 🎉 Trailer link in bio. 🤘

Why This Caption Works

The asterisked onomatopoeias catch the eye, while the rest of the caption aims to boost excitement for a new video release from Wistia. The “link in bio” tactic should be used sparingly in your caption strategy, but when it’s to a long-form video or article, it’s totally acceptable.
